LCBO employees have nothing to strike over

May 28, 2009

JAMES FOX

Dear Editor - I am disgusted by the news that the Liquor Control Board of Ontario's employees are threatening to strike.

Do they not live in Canada? Can they not see the issues everyone is having?

Hard working people are losing their jobs, and having extremely hard times even getting by -- and the employees of the LCBO are snivelling they want more money just to work in a booze store? Give me a break.

How can you justify making these demands at a time when everyone's losing their employment, just for putting bottles on a shelf or pushing buttons on a cash register? I consider the local paperboy's work to be of more value than that of anyone who works at a glorified convenience store such as the LCBO.

It makes me sick. Fire them all. Replace them with people who aren't whining or as greedy.

The LCBO doesn't even need cashiers. Those checkouts can be made self-serve, just like at Wal-Mart.

James Fox, Guelph
